

The College of William and Mary Summer 2010 Archaeological Field School Bermuda

Directors:

Dr. Marley Brown III

Dr. Edward Harris

Session Dates:

1 June-2 July 2010

6 July-6 August 2010

Costs:

Six Credits at the College of William and Mary:
Anthropology 225/625

Virginia Instate Tuition
$1440

Out-of-State Tuition
$5280

Room and Board:
$1200

Includes breakfast, lunch, communal dinners and room at the National Museum of Bermuda Hostel

Airfare: not included

For more information and an application:

Email us at: bermuda@wm.edu

or

Visit our website at: bermuda.wm.edu

The 2010 William and Mary Archaeological Field School will take place in two five-week sessions. Students will receive training in archaeological field techniques as well as artifact identification and laboratory methods.

This summer's program will focus on two projects. First, excavations will take place at Whitehall an 18th century domestic structure in the heart of the UNESCO World Heritage site of St. George's, Bermuda's Colonial Capital from 1612-1815. This work will provide invaluable insight into 18th century domestic life in St. George's. Second, students will participate in a survey of several 18th and 19th century shipbuilding sites along Bermuda's North Shore, which were vital to the island's successful maritime economy.

Bermuda, one of the oldest British colonies in the Western Hemisphere, is a 22-mile long island located in the North Atlantic. Bermuda was settled in 1612, three years after the crew of the Sea Venture wrecked on the island during a voyage from England to rescue the fledgling Jamestown Colony in Virginia. During the 18th and 19th centuries Bermuda had an active maritime economy. Today, Bermuda remains a vibrant international community in the middle of the Atlantic.

